1500 Acres of Alpine Farms Sold To Chi. Realtors

Within the past few weeks 1500 acres of farm land in and around Alpine have been purchased by the Frederick H. Bartlett Company of Chicago, realtors. It is said that some farms were sold for $260 per acre and more. It is understood that the whole transaction was a cash one and that the entire deal runs better than $200,000.00. Just to what use the realtors are going to put the newly acquired property has not been made known. Among the farms reported sold are the Thatcher, Lucas, Blackburn, Spiess and several other farms.

Much speculation is being indulged in now as to whether Alpine will come into her own after the many years it has been at a standstill since its hey day when a boom came near putting Alpine on the map but the boom turned out to be only a bubble. This time if a real boom does come it will no doubt go over big as an old and well established company is back of the project. This whole territory is in the path of a building boom as the trend of the extension of Chicago and its suburbs is westward. A big real estate and building boom is looked forward to within the next year or two.

Albert Cappel Is Named For Office of School Director

The Mokena village school director election to be held next month promises to be real hot affair according to the present outlook of things. The term of J. C. Nielsen as school director expires this spring and Mr. Nielsen says he is not going to be in the race for this office this year. August Hentsch announced himself as a candidate for this office recently and the past week Albert Cappel has been also announced as a candidate for this office and it is said there may be a few more entries. The election will be held the latter part of April.

MOKENA RAISES $30

Hear of Storm

Via Radio

Radio owners in this section were the first to hear of the great tornado in southern Illinois. Altenburg, Mo., where the August Hentsch and Albert Hellmuth families of Mokena have relatives living was also hit by the twister and one death is reported there.

When the news was broadcasted that a relief fund was being raised in Chicago for the storm victims, Richard Hensel, druggist at Mokena headed the Mokena list with a $5 subscription.

Thursday two men who said they had just come thru the devastated area a few days ago said the people had already been hard hit by the closing of a number of coal mines and this latest disaster leaves many of them entirely destitute.

"Safety First"

Comes to Frankfort

The play "Safety First" which has been presented by the Epworth League of the Tinley Park German M. E. Church at Tinley Park and Mokena and which has scored a big hit at both places is to be presented at the Frankfort hall on Friday night, March 27th. Everyone is invited. This play is an excellent well and well acted out. There is not a dull moment in it. Don't fail to see it.

CAUCUS SATURDAY

This coming Saturday the Republican and People's parties of Frankfort township will hold their annual caucuses at the Mokena public school to nominate a town ticket to be voted on at the annual town election in April. This is the off year and only a small ticket is in the field. Two constables, 2 justices of the peace and a school director are to be nominated. It is said a few hard road petitions are also to be voted on.

Easter Sunday evening will be given over to the Sunday school exercises. A big program is being planned for and a record attendance is expected.

The new bulletin board is gracing the lawn of the Town Square.

The Epworth League is making things hum for the Young People in the community. They held a business meeting and social last week at the home of Mrs. Griswold. They have started a Personal Evangelism class for their Sunday evening meetings and they ask that every one attending next Sunday evening, to bring a pencil and paper, also a bible. They expect to turn the League meeting into a Seminary Bible study class.

On Wednesday March the 25th the church will conduct a social in the evening to which every one is invited.

The Mokena Girl Scouts are going to do their bit to aid the victims of the southern Illinois tornado by holding a candy sale at the Cooper & Hostert garage Mokena on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The proceeds of which are to go entirely for the tornado relief fund.

Blizzard Sweeps Country Wednesday

The biggest blizzard of the entire winter hit this section Wednesday afternoon. At first a drizzling rain fell which soon turned into snow and by evening the whole country was snow bound. Trains were delayed as also were the buses on the Lincoln highway and on the concrete road between Orland and 95th street.

Michael Knupp

Claimed by Death

Michael L. Knupp, aged 69 years former Mokena resident died Sunday following an attack of pneumonia at his home northwest of New Lenox. Funeral services were held Tuesday from the late home of the Marley church, Rev. A. L. Brown officiating. Burial in Marshall cemetery.

Michael Laphyet Knupp was born in Augusta County, Virginia, September 3, 1855.

At the age of 12 years he moved with his parents to Illinois and has lived in this state ever since.

On December 24, 1879 he was united in marriage with Lerna May Thompson at Rantoul, Ill. To his union were born three sons and three daughters, one son preceeding the father in death.

In June 1881 he united with the Baptist church at Paxton, Ill.

He leaves to mourn his loss his widow two sons Jothan F., and Jacob, three daughters Myrtle Alexander, Carrie Roberts and Nancy Peterson, 25 grand children and 2 great grand children, one brother and four sisters.

At the funeral services the grand sons were pall bearers at the granddaughters were flower bearers.

He was buried by the White Store as a result of the purchase of the Smith & Blackburn stock. Don't miss these bargains.

White Store Puts Over Big Deal

The White Store, Joliet well and widely known to many people in Will County, has closed another big deal according to Mr. Cohn, manager of the store, whereby The White Store has acquired the entire stock of the Smith & Blackburn Clothing Store on North Chicago Street, Joliet. This store has been in business for 20 years and carried the popular "Society Brand" clothing. This makes three old established stores that have been acquired by the White Store within a few weeks, the B. & A., and Art Lannon being the other stores who disposed of their stocks to The White Store and many big bargains have been offered by the White Store and quickly snapped up by the public. The past week Mr. Cohn reports his store sold 500 suits of clothes. Many wonderful bargains are now again being offered.

Orland Faces Real Boom This Spring

Orland is going to have a big real estate boom this spring. The old Wagner farm east of Orland which was sold last summer to a realtor from Hinsdale is to be laid out in lots this spring and a big drive will be put on to put this new subdivision over big.

A new subdivision will also be opened on the Humphrey property and lots will be sold.

The Sedgwick property adjoining the Orland school was bought by a Chicago concern sometime ago for a reported consideration of approximately $55,000.00. Thus it appears that Orland is going to be a bustling and thriving community of new homes and new people this summer. Orland has a big future and will be a live and coming little city one of these days.

To Give A Series of Plays this Spring

The Young People's Society of the Immanuel Lutheran church at Mokena is going to conduct a series of plays this spring. The first play "Ruth In a Rush" will be presented at the Mokena Men's Club pavilion on May 1st. On May 13th they will present a play at the Grange hall at New Lenox and also at Joliet, the date to be announced later. They will also give a play at the Saenger hall at Tinley Park on May 5th.

What is a Christian?

A topic which has always been a source of debate and great interest will be discussed on this coming Sunday evening at the Mokena M. E. church when the Rev. A. R. Mangus will take for his theme the question "What is a Christian?" Everyone is invited.

Services at 7:30 o'clock.

Lesson for March 22

THE FORTY DAYS AND THE AS-CENSION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-53.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye are witnesses of these things."—Luke 24:48.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Goes Back to His Father.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Ascends to Heaven.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—The Forty Days and the Ascension.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Ever Living Christ.

I. The Walk of Two Discouraged
Disciples (vv. 13-15).

Emmaus was seven and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why they were walking this way we do not surely know. Perhaps their home was there, or they were merely walking to seek relief from their stunning sorrow.
If they had believed what Jesus told them about His death and resurrection they would have escaped this great disappointment. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. If they had believed what He said about coming forth from the grave they would have been expecting to hear just such reports as were being circulated.

II. The Unrecognized Companion
(vv. 16-24).

1. Who He Was—Jesus (v. 15).
While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days Jesus joined them. Even when He questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize Him.
Many times we are so taken up with our sorrows and disappointments that we do not recognize Jesus walking by our side.

2. His Question (v. 17).
Perceiving their sadness and perplexities, He sought to help by calling forth a statement of their grief.

3. Their Answer (v. 18).

His question so surprised them that they jumped at the conclusion that He was a stranger in Jerusalem, for the condemnation and crucifixion of the great Prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one that had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them. One valuable feature of the unbelief of the disciples was that it revealed the fact that they were not credulous enthusiasts, but hard to convince. Out of this incredulity of the disciples developed unshaken faith in Christ's resurrection.

III. The Scriptures Opened (vv. 25-32).

He did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories that they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures. They had only accepted such parts of the Old Testament as sifted their notions. Men and women who do not believe all that the Scriptures say about the work of the blessed Savior are entirely blameworthy. The very center and heart of the Old Testament Scriptures set forth the death and resurrection of Christ. It is ignorance of the Scriptures and unbelief of the wonders and complete redemption wrought by Christ that robs us of many joys, and power and efficiency as workers for Christ.

2. Jesus Recognized (vv. 31-35).

While sitting at meat with the disciples their eyes were opened as they saw Him bless the bread and distribute it to them. We, too, can see the Lord on such common occasions as eating a meal, if we have open eyes.

Indeed we ought to see Him when eating, selling, buying and in our recreations, for He has promised us His presence. They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Savior that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of His resurrection.

IV. Jesus Stands in the Midst of the Eleven (vv. 36-47).

1. He said, "Peace be unto you" (vv.
36-47), but they were terrified and affrighted. Sinful man in the presence of God is ill at ease.

2. He showed them His hands and His feet (vv. 38-40). In order to convince them of His personal identity He gave them tangible evidence that He was not a mere spirit.

3. He ate before them (vv. 41-45).

4. He commissioned them to evangelize the world (vv. 46-49).

They were to testify concerning His shed blood and resurrection, and on this ground they were to preach repentance and remission of sins to all nations.

V. Jesus Ascends Into Heaven (vv.
50-53).

Having given them the parting message to evangelize the world, He ascended into heaven. Just as we treasure the last words of our departed loved ones so we should ponder this farewell message of the Lord.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle.
Thus No. 1 under the column headed "Horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "Vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

FAIMAN ADMITS TYPHOID PLOT

Confesses He Gave Germs to Shepherd to Kill Young McClintock.

Chicago.—William Darling Shepherd was directly accused as the slayer of William McClintock, the millionaire orphan.

The accusation was made in a complete confession by Dr. Charles D. Faiman, head of the so-called National University of Sciences, that he and Shepherd conspired over a period of a year to take young McClintock's life by means of typhoid germ poisoning.

Faiman declared, in the course of a deliberate and slowly traced confession, that he furnished typhoid germs to Shepherd; that he instructed Shepherd from time to time in the care and culture of the germs, and that it was perfectly well understood between them that young McClintock should be killed for his fortune and that the fortune should be divided by the slayers.

Faiman and Shepherd were taken to the state's attorney's office.

Shepherd and Faiman were brought face to face, Faiman was again asked if Shepherd had got germs from him.

Faiman suddenly leaned forward,
shook his finger in Shepherd's face,
and burst out:

"He got the germs from me. I gave those tubes of cultures to Shepherd.
He told me he wanted them for a million-dollar deal and he would pay me plenty."

Shepherd turned to the state's attorney and said: "I never saw this man in my life before. I suppose you call him me, but I am innocent."

Faiman said he met Shepherd in November, 1923. After some preliminaries they began talking of the uses of germs. This led to talk of the implantation of cultures with the idea of causing death. Then they came to the point.

Faiman said Shepherd told him he was foster father of young McClintock.
Mrs. Shepherd was the boy's guardian.
Young McClintock would soon come into $1,000,000. Also he would likely marry Miss Isabelle Pope as soon as he came of age. Faiman said Shepherd proposed that they implant typhoid germs in young McClintock, cause his death, collect the fortune,
and divide.

"I agreed to do this," Faiman explained. "I instructed Shepherd in the culture of germs. I gave him three tubes. There were three distinct species. I told him how to guard them

"ARE YOU A WITCH?"

SYNOPSIS—Nurses in the Southern hospital at Avonmouth are angered by the insolent treatment accorded them by Dr. John Lancaster, head of the institution, and there is a general feeling of unrest, into which Joan Wentworth, probationary nurse, is drawn. Doctor Lancaster is performing a difficult operation, for which he has won fame. Joan, with other nurses, is in attendance. She is upset, through no fault of her own, and makes a trivial blunder at a critical moment. The patient dies and Doctor Lancaster accuses her of clumsiness. She is suspended, the action meaning the end of her hope of a career as a nurse. Without relatives or friends, and desperate, Joan, urged by her landlady, goes to Doctor Lancaster's office to ask him to overlook her blunder and reinstate her. She overhears a violent altercation between Doctor Lancaster and other men she does not see. Joan is struck by the favorable change in the appearance and demeanor of the doctor, recalling that at times in the hospital he has been gentle and thoughtful and at others supercilious and bullying. He tells her he can do nothing for her at the hospital, but offers her a position in a nursing institution in the country, telling her she can be of "great assistance" to him. A man named Myers demands she tell him what the doctor had said to her. She denies him the information, and he covertly threatens her. At the institution, which is owned by Doctor Lancaster, Joan finds Myers. He tells her he is the secretary. She instinctively dislikes and fears him. The only patient at the institution is a Mrs. Dana, demented but harmless. Joan is vaguely uneasy, feeling that there is some mystery about the place. Doctor Lancaster arrives. Joan accuses him of deceiving her, declaring her intention of leaving. He tells her he is the patient who needs her, saying he wants help in a "big fight," but makes no further explanation. She decides to stay. Evidently Doctor Lancaster is afraid of Myers. Joan discovers that the doctor is a victim of the morphine habit. Joan takes charge of him, helping him to overcome temporarily his craving for the drug. Myers accuses her of "meddling," but she refuses to leave or to give up her care of Lancaster.

"For happiness, perhaps—I don't know. But not for duty. Your life is to be used, Doctor Lancaster, for the sake of the people, and I am going to help you use it. Your wonderful skill—"

He groaned at the words. Joan saw that, though he was suffering physically, there was some mental trouble which her words had evoked.

"Doctor Lancaster," she said, "the first thing you have to do is to use your will. And I am going to give you your first test, a little one only. It will last thirty seconds. Can you put forth your will for just that length of time?"

He fixed his eyes anxiously on hers and nodded. Yet she saw them waver toward the bottle.

"I am going to cross the room," she said. "Don't stir a finger till I return."

She heard Myers in the hall, and, going to the door, she turned the key. She heard Myers halt near her door. But she had no time to think of him. She went back to Lancaster, whose hands were strained hard against the arms of the chair.

"Well done!" she said.

"Miss Wentworth, I must have that hypodermic now."

"I want you to wait. Wait half an hour, Doctor Lancaster."

"I can't!" he cried, starting up. "I tell you I must have it. After an overdose one must have a smaller one. It will set me up nicely. Just half the quantity, Miss Wentworth."

"In half an hour," said Joan.

He sprang to his feet, shaking and furious. "Give me that bottle at once!" he cried.

"In half an hour."

Lancaster sat down. "Confound you, why ever did you come here?" he asked. "Suppose that I discharge you?"

"I shall not go, Doctor Lancaster. We have covered that point in our conversation already."

Then, seeing his distress, she went on rapidly: "Listen to me, Doctor Lancaster. You brought me here upon an impulse, because you had no one whom you could trust. You wanted to fight and you wanted me to fight with you. Well, I am going to do it, and we are going to win." She took out her watch and laid it on the table. "In twenty-five minutes you shall have half a dose. Then we shall have won the first skirmish. O, Doctor Lancaster, fight like a man and help us win!"

She spoke with so much earnestness that she kindled his enthusiasm. "Yes, we'll make the fight!" he cried, with blazing eyes. "If only I had had you long ago!"

He was in the full reaction from his despondency. He struck his fist emphatically upon the arm of the chair.

"I'll be a man again!" he cried. "If you knew everything, Miss Wentworth, you might understand how a man can be caught in a snare of his own making. But I'll win, with your aid, and I'll be my own master again."

"You are your own master now, Doctor Lancaster. Always think that and remember it."

"My own master? When that hound follows me—"

"Mr. Myers is your servant."

Lancaster laughed harshly. "By heaven!" he cried, "I'll tell him so. Miss Wentworth, give me that dose now, so that I can feel like a man again and have the strength to send him about his business."

"It will give you strength," she answered, "but it will not make you yourself, your better self. You will no longer want to send him about his business."

Lancaster stared at her. "How do you know that?" he asked. "Are you a witch? It's true. But I can't wait any longer. I have waited fifteen minutes. Half an hour next time, Miss Wentworth, the third drawer—"

As her eyes went toward the desk he snatched up the bottle and hypodermic from the table. Joan caught at his wrist. But Lancaster had already plunged the syringe into the fluid, and he was upon his feet.

He tried to free his hand, he fought furiously, but Joan succeeded in knocking the bottle from his grasp. It fell upon the table. Lancaster righted it, and suddenly darted toward the desk. Joan caught him. He flung her across the room. He had got the drawer open when she grappled with him again.

He struck at her with his right hand, beating her about the wrists, but she would not let go. She would never leave go, not though he struck her in the face. He tossed her this way and that, but she never unclasped her hold. At last he dropped into his chair exhausted and covered his face with his hands.

"Twelve minutes more," said Joan triumphantly, looking at her watch.

Then she realized that all through the struggle there had been a hammering at the door. She got up. "Who is it?" she called.

"Miss Wentworth, unlock the door, please," came the frightened voice of Mrs. Fraser.

"In a few minutes," said Joan.

"Miss Wentworth, what are you doing to Doctor Lancaster?"

"I am taking care of him."

"Mr. Myers says you will kill him. He has got to have his morphine; you can't stop a man abruptly like that. Mr. Myers understands him—"

"Mr. Myers can come in in fifteen minutes," said Joan. All the while she spoke she had never taken her eyes from Lancaster's face.

Lancaster was suffering acutely. The sweat streamed down his face, and he was looking at her with the eyes of a suffering animal. Yet it was not until the watch hand was on the hour that Joan took the bottle from the desk.

"The whole bottle is a normal dose," said Lancaster, through his teeth.

Joan drew one-fourth into the syringe.

"You must give me all, Miss Wentworth. That little quantity is useless."

He was lying about the strength of the dose, and he knew that Joan knew. She did not answer him. He extended his arm, and she plunged the needle into the wrist. Then she corked the bottle and she put it into the pocket of her uniform, having previously added the small quantity in the bottle upon the table.

The hammering at the door had begun again. But the girl waited until the spasms of pain disappeared from Lancaster's face. He rose.

"Miss Wentworth!" he began gratefully. Then, catching sight of her bruised wrists, he took her hands in his.

"Did I do that?" he cried.

"Not you, Doctor Lancaster," answered Joan, snatching her wrists away. "Your enemy—our enemy, who is now worsted in his first field of battle."

"Miss Wentworth, you see now what I am. I can't hold you to your promise. You must leave me. Who's that at the door?"

"We shall see," answered Joan, and unlocked it.

Myers was standing outside, white with rage, and with him was Doctor Jenkins, looking uneasy and embarrassed; his eyes fell before Joan's.

"Tell her what you told me!" stammered Myers, beside himself with his anger.

"Miss Wentworth," faltered Jenkins, "indeed you don't understand what you are doing. Doctor Lancaster—"

"Is a mighty sick man," burst out the secretary. "And it's my job to prevent him from being killed by meddlers. He picked this nurse up somewhere and she's trying to get rid of me and have the charge of the doctor. I won't stand for it," he added to Joan. "I warned you twice today, and you paid no attention to me. Now you can pack up and leave the institution. Isn't that right, doctor?" he added, to Lancaster.

To Joan's stupefaction, Lancaster's old irresolution had already returned, and more; he seemed to ally himself with the secretary. The morphine, which had restored his body, had lent him its own false personality.

"Well, you see, Miss Wentworth means well," he said slowly, "but she doesn't realize conditions. You see," he added, turning to Joan but not meeting her eyes, "one has to taper off very slowly in a desperate case like mine. I'm very far gone, and heroic measures are useless."

"That's right. Now tell her to go," said Myers.

"Yes, Miss Wentworth, I really don't believe that you can do any good here," said Lancaster obediently. "It was a mistake. You shall be paid a full month's salary. Ask Mr. Myers to make out your check."

"She can drive back with Doctor Jenkins now," suggested Myers.

"She can drive back with Doctor Jenkins," agreed Lancaster, and Joan saw the secretary's pale face blaze with triumph.

"And you might get me a few more bottles from the storeroom," whispered Lancaster to Myers. "I'm very shaky. I must have enough on hand in case I wake up in the night. You understand my needs, Myers," he continued, with a catch of self-pity in his voice.

Joan did not hesitate a moment. She slipped between the two men and ran to the storeroom. With a muttered oath Myers ran after her. The girl was just in time to slam the door in his face and lean against it inside, bracing her foot against a plank and using the whole weight of her body.

She heard Myers breathe heavily as he tried to force his entrance. He dashed himself madly against it, but Joan knew that she would die rather than yield.

"Open that door!" shrieked Myers. In uncontrolled fury. "Open at once, do you hear me?"

Joan looked hastily about her. Some instinct seemed to tell her that the case of morphine bottles was hidden under the linen pile in the near corner. By stretching out one hand without giving way in the least Joan could just reach far enough to toss away the napkins. There were dozens of the tiny bottles in the packing case beneath—enough to kill a herd of oxen.

Joan heard Jenkins' protesting voice outside, and the irresolute tones of Lancaster. The matron was speaking, too. The girl did not know what they were saying to Myers, beyond the general sense of their expostulations, but she felt her will ride high above the storm of conflict.

A hammer lay on the shelf. Joan took it in her hand.

"Listen!" she cried to those outside. "I have the morphine and I have the hammer. And I am going to break every bottle in this room—"

Lancaster cried out pitifully at her words. "Miss Wentworth, you will kill me if you do!"

"Unless this case passes into my possession. I am going to have the storeroom key, and I am going to take charge of Doctor Lancaster, who has employed me for that especial purpose, during this month."

The silence of stupefaction outside was complete. Joan flung the door open boldly and stood before the group, the hammer in her hand. She saw Lancaster, with eyes bent inquiringly upon hers, the matron and Jenkins, mute, and Myers, leaning against the opposite wall of the passage, regarding her with venomous impotence.

"Well, what do you say to that, doctor?" he sneered.

Joan is putting up a good fight against big odds. Is Doctor Lancaster worth saving?

Canal Makes Record

Traffic through the Welland canal during the season of 1924 was the heaviest of any year in the history of that waterway. From its opening last year on April 16 to its close on December 13, the freight carried through the canal amounted to 5,037,412 tons, which was more than 1,280,000 tons ahead of the previous year and 1,750,000 tons ahead of the previous high record made in 1914.

Wanted to Be Hugged

Doris, three years old, awoke the other morning full of the child's joy of being alive. First she enthusiastically hugged mother, then as gleefully hugged daddy. She waited a few seconds and, there being no apparent intention on the part of either parent to reciprocate her affectionate greetings, said:

"I wish I had some one to hug me."

There is an oblique way of reproof which takes off from the sharpness of it.

Somehow modesty manages to parade in public frequently.

"Did Milton Visit Heaven?"

Certain facetious critics are poking fun at Eli Siegel of Baltimore, the reported winner of the annual poetry prize offered by the Nation. The ground of the criticism is simple. Mr. Siegel's poem is called "Hot Afternoons I Have Seen in Montana," and he confesses he has never been in Montana. The critics find this humorous.

Mr. Siegel's reply should be simple. He should point out that two previous poets—John Milton and Dante—wrote poems on heaven and hell long before either of them had ever seen either place.—Baltimore Sun.

Wm. Hodge Returns

William Hodge, the nationally beloved actor, has returned to the Studebaker Theatre, for a limited engagement of four weeks ending positively on April 11th. Once again he is seen in "For All Of Us" the great laughing success in which he has already played one entire season in Chicago, and one entire season in New York.

"For All Of Us", is described by the critics as a play with a universal appeal which wins all classes of people. Mr. Hodge is seen as Tom Griswald, a humorous and lovable old Irish ditch-digger, the boss of a gang of workmen, who is thrown by chance into the house of a wealthy banker whose mental and physical welfare have been wrecked by illness. Tom has evolved a theory that all diseases are fundamentally the results of wrong-thinking. Montagne once said, "As we think, so we are", and so re-echoing his sentiments, the ditch-digger offers a cure to the wary financier, whose home and happiness are broken. The results are startling and at the same time most amusing, and an appealing love story is unfolded.

In the opinion of many critics, Mr. Hodge's performance is destined to rank with the greatest of the theatre. In the words of the New York Evening Mail, "Mr. Hodge adds an unforgettable portrait to the gallery of great American stage characters." Not since "The Man From Home" has he been seen to such advantage, and he has the superior support of an exceptional cast including Charlotte Wynters, as the charming Jo, Frank Losee as the banker, Marion Abbott, Frank Burbeck, Courtney White, Lucille Huston, Frank Charlton, J. Warren Lyons, Philip Dunning and Jane Lanbe.

The prices for this special engagement are: evenings (except Saturday) 75c, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50; Saturday nights $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. On Wednesday and Saturday afternoons there will be popular price matinees with the entire main floor at $2.00, the entire balcony at $1.50, and the entire gallery at 75c.

Coughs Always Dangerous—Quick Way to Stop Them

Chronic coughs and chest colds often lead to more serious trouble. Not only is the infection itself dangerous, but the continual coughing spells day and night so weaken your entire system that you can no longer fight off disease.
So stop a cough the quickest way you can. To do this there is nothing better than that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar extract to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation.
The quick relief to the stubborn cough often seems almost magical.
But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original pine-tar honey and has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. Contains no opiates or other harmful drugs, so can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic croup. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only 30c at all good druggists.
